Differentiate Yourself through PMI Membership

The Project Management Institute (PMI), formed in 1969, is a not-for-profit, international organization for project management professionals. PMI has over 250 chapters representing 70+ countries with total membership over 305,000. PMI is one of the fastest growing professional organizations in the world.

The primary goal of PMI is to advance the practice, science and profession of project management throughout the world in a conscientious and proactive manner. PMI membership supports and encourages all project professionals to pursue global and local best practices, relationship building and resource sharing.

In 2008 PMI initiated a research study to measure the value of project management. Among the results, the research showed that project management has a positive influence on creative thinking, provides hard value in saved dollars, and diminishes silos in the organization while increasing collaboration by the project team.
